~ Dr. Adam Maddox, Thrive Aesthetic & Anti-Aging Center

Aging America: According to the CDC, longer life spans and aging baby boomers will combine to double the population of Americans aged 65 years or older during the next 25 years to over 70 million. By 2030 older adults will count for roughly 20% of the U.S. population.

Changing The Way We Age: Since significant health concerns were raised for women using synthetic hormones, millions of women have stopped their hormone replacement therapy and are searching for alternatives. Natural bio-identical hormones have been the preferred choice in European countries and are now receiving significant attention in the U.S.

The Solution: Since the late 1930s, subcutaneous hormone pellet therapy has been used around the world. Patient demand for bio-identical hormones is increasing and subcutaneous hormone pellet therapy is the most effective way to deliver the results.

Dr. Adam Maddox has more than 15 years of extensive experience studying, researching, and practicing bio-identical hormone replacement for men and women. Dr. Maddox lectures, trains, and consults physicians on a multitude of cosmetic and age management treatments. Dr. Maddox has performed over 1,000 subcutaneous pellet implant procedures in his practice. He maintains regular annual attendance and membership with several age management societies. He is the owner and medical director of Thrive Aesthetic and Anti-Aging Center, a well-respected and busy medical clinic in Portland, Oregon. Dr. Maddox believes in healthy aging and preventative medicine for the aging population and has dedicated his life’s practice to specialize in minimally invasive cosmetic and age management medicine.

College Pharmacy has been compounding BHRT Fused Pellet Implants since 1988. As one of the more experienced compounding pharmacies in the U.S., we were one of the first compounding pharmacies to work with healthcare practitioners in the mid-1980s that wanted their patients to have access to this dosage form that had been popular into the 1970s. Unlike earlier versions, our fused pellet implants were created using more advanced compounding technology and BHRT formulations. The entire compounding process is an important “ingredient” in creating a BHRT pellet implant. Unstable pellets that crack or crumble can have a negative impact on the quality of treatment. We have spent many years perfecting the technique to ensure the quality of our materials meets the highest expectations.

Bio-Identical Hormone Pellet Therapy is used in the treatment and/or prevention of:
